Celebrating a Legacy of Health Philanthropy
Annabella Ravenscroft Jenkins was born. The devastation of the Civil War kindled her passion for helping the City’s sick and destitute.

Annabella enlisted the support of a prominent group of Lady Managers and established Retreat Hospital for the Sick. In its first year, the hospital treated 168 patients regardless of their race, class or ability to pay.

The Jenkins Foundation was created as a supporting organization of The Community Foundation following the sale of Retreat Hospital. Named for Annabella Jenkins, its purpose is to expand access to community-based health services and to improve the quality of health in the Richmond region.

The Jenkins Foundation celebrates its 20th anniversary, proud of $29 million in total grants which have been given to over 100 local organizations. Through the strategic work of the Foundation, Annabella’s legacy endures.
LETTER TO THE COMMUNITY

This year, the Jenkins Foundation celebrates its 20th anniversary. To mark the occasion, we are pleased to share a snapshot of our story—of those who began our work and highlights from two decades of positive impact in the Greater Richmond region.

Inspired by the pioneering vision of Annabella Jenkins, the Foundation is committed to improving the health and wellness of our community. We are grateful for the service of a dedicated group of women who have comprised our Board of Directors over the years. Under their guidance, our endowment has more than doubled since 1995 while the Foundation has awarded grants of over $29 million. Along with our remarkable community partners, we believe we have made a significant impact while ensuring our legacy continues. Our impact is reflected in a more efficient health care delivery system and a safer, healthier and more productive community.

We will continue to look at the emerging ideas and innovative work of area organizations who share our vision. Together, we can carry on the work Annabella Jenkins began so many years ago. We are excited about the many opportunities that lie ahead.

“Inspired by the pioneering vision of Annabella Jenkins, the Foundation is committed to improving the health and wellness of our community.”

Inspiración

Continuando una tradición de proporcionar cuidado compasivo

La inspiración para la Fundación Jenkins proviene de la historia de Annabella Ravenscroft Jenkins, una pionera del siglo XIX que abrió su casa a soldados heridos durante la Guerra Civil. Su creciente preocupación por las necesidades de salud de la población mediada condujo al establecimiento de Retreat for the Sick (posteriormente llamado The Retreat Hospital), que proporcionaba atención médica con una escalera de tarifas y atención gratuita a aquellos que no podían pagar. Hoy, la Fundación Jenkins embody la misma espiritu de compasión y cuidado en su labor para mejorar la atención médica en Greater Richmond.

El Consejo de Administración de la Fundación ha nutrido el legado de Annabella durante los años, aplicando su visión a los desafíos contemporáneos. Hoy, el otorgamiento de ayudas está enfocado en el acceso equitativo a los servicios de salud, así como programas que reduzcan el comportamiento riesgoso y promuevan entornos seguros y saludables. Los socios no lucrativos utilizan nuestros recursos para maximizar sus propios—propiciando innovación, colaboración y eficiencia. Nuestra mayor inspiración, sin embargo, se encuentra en los niños que envidian un futuro sin violencia, familias que prosperan juntas y comunidades que priorizan estilos de vida saludables.

“The altruistic and unprejudiced ideals of Annabella Jenkins provided an example for our Board of Directors to follow. Today, they are fully engaged in finding new and effective ways to support compassionate, affordable care for the Richmond community.”

— Bev Lacy, primer presidente del consejo de administración de la Fundación Jenkins
Growth

Building resources for our future

“The wonderful thing about the Jenkins Foundation is that they don’t expect perfect partners. They work with you to overcome obstacles and to make your programs work with maximum effectiveness.”

—Julie Bilodeau, Executive Director, CrossOver Ministry

The Jenkins Foundation has become a pacesetter in local health philanthropy, growing in both size and influence. Through good stewardship and wise investment strategies, our endowment has reached $49 million and cumulative grants now total $29 million. This growth means that the Foundation has greater flexibility to build the capacity of its nonprofit partners and move the needle on important issues affecting the health status of residents in Greater Richmond.

One of the Foundation’s key funding priorities is to increase access to primary care for the uninsured and underinsured by strengthening the region’s health safety net. Grants have not only seeded new health clinics in previously underserved areas, but also expanded operations for mainstay organizations like CrossOver Ministry. Support from the Jenkins Foundation allowed CrossOver to initiate key projects like the clinic in Western Henrico and their pharmacy, and build internal capacity with funding for a volunteer coordinator and their move to electronic health records.

Impact

Improving health outcomes in Greater Richmond

Our board strives to make strategic funding decisions that not only address immediate needs, but also have the potential for long-term impact. We utilize the expertise of community partners to understand the challenges patients and families face in accessing services or using them effectively. We also monitor and measure the impact of our grants. Some of our earliest investments continue to produce benefits years later.

In 1998, the Jenkins Foundation pledged $1.34 million to VCU’s Medical College of Virginia Hospitals to implement the Care Coordination project, a model that aligned health professionals to help uninsured residents navigate to the right level of care at the right place and right time. Case managers connected patients to community resources and provided education to reduce emergency room visits. This program served as the framework for the Virginia Coordinated Care for the Uninsured (VCC) program that is now a nationally recognized partnership with more than 50 community-based providers that provide access to free or discounted primary care. Jenkins’ investment allowed VCU to improve services to an often neglected patient population with a result of positive community wellness and health care cost savings.

“The leadership investments made by the Jenkins Foundation in the safety net provider community allow for the ongoing care for thousands of uninsured and underinsured who have limited options for care.”

—Sheryl Garland, VP Health Policy and Community Relations, VCU
Vision

Partnering to advance long-term solutions

The Jenkins Foundation demonstrates vision through its willingness to boldly invest in new or innovative projects that have potential to fill service gaps for Richmond’s most vulnerable populations. Not only did the Jenkins Foundation provide a $1 million lead gift to bring The Healing Place to Richmond in 2003, it remained at the table to ensure continued success. Beyond our initial investment, subsequent grants supported the organization’s merger with CARITAS and integration of training and transition services—all to produce the best possible result for previously homeless men participating in this nationally recognized addiction recovery program. With a continuous look forward, Jenkins remains engaged in plans to develop a complementary program for women.

Even as we celebrate progress to date, we also look forward to the meaningful conversations and opportunities ahead. Community change can be hard and it is often incremental, but we remain committed. With our long-term vision and a constantly growing network of dedicated partners, there is so much more we can achieve together.

“The Jenkins Foundation was gutsy. Addiction is not a glamorous subject. They made a bold move to commit and they have shown every step of the way that they want to be part of the solution.”

—Karen Stanley, CEO of CARITAS/The Healing Place
